

Weekly Report 26 Oct 2026

SET Index closed slightly lower on weekly basis at 1562 on Friday. This week, the SET market will consolidate sideways and thread within 1540 – 1580 range in either direction. Trades are reminded to stay cautious in swings. The USD/THB exchange rate climbed slightly higher last week and closed at 33.74 level on Friday. This week, we target the exchange rate will thread sideways within 33.40 – 33.80 region.

Gold spot prices fell in weak demand and settled at USD3995 /oz on Friday. This week, we project the yellow metal will exhibit continual weakness and test the eventual support at USD3940 /oz level. Breaking beneath this support will initiate a new wave of selling into bear trend. Otherwise, a technical rebound may also occur from USDD3940 – USD4020 /oz region.

WTI Crude spot prices rose on Friday and closed at USD102.83 /barrel before the weekend. This week, we expect the market to run bullish and continue to surge from USD98.00 – USD110.00 /barrel. Looming outlook at the Middle East conflict between U.S. – Iran military confrontation is closely observed by international traders.

Silver spot prices settled at USD53.91 /oz on Friday and sitting on the support line now. This week, it is possible for the market to slide further and trade within USD49.00 – USD56.00/oz region. In our opinion, the market will only turn bullish when the uptrend reverses and settled above USD56.00 /oz level.
